STRING came in promptly, at the ap pointed time, with a bound. We were transposed at once from the bitter cold of winter to the genial atmosphere of Spring. Nature smiles giadly, and all the hills and trees clap their hands for joy. The robin redbreast from topmort peak of leafless trees trills forth a merry welcome song, and gladly hails the advent of the fairy queen. The tiny brook with swelling flood its murmuring song breathes forth, telling to every passing breeze, and trailing vine that Spring has come. Ah, yes, Spring has come, repeats the truant orchin, hiding carefully from the dreaded muster's rod, as slowly he picks his way tovard the envied bird's nest, but no eggs or birdlets reward his trouble vet.
